

Good Manufacturing Practice and Regulation

GMP refers to the Good Manufacturing Practice Regulations promulgated by the US Food and Drug Administration under the authority of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act. These regulations require that anyone who participates in the manufacture or transport of certain items, including some foods take proactive steps to ensure that the products are protected and remain pure and safe. Oakley Transport, Inc.'s GMP policy requires a quality approach to transportation. This enables Oakley Transport, Inc. to minimize or eliminate instances of contamination and errors. This in turn, protects our nation's consumers and our clients from purchasing or using a product which is not pure or possibly dangerous. Oakley Transport, Inc. trains all of our drivers to use a GMP approach by having high security awareness, monitor security points and report any suspicious activities. Oakley Transport, Inc.'s own GMP policies address recordkeeping, personnel qualifications, sanitation, cleanliness, equipment verification, validation of processes and complaint handling. Oakley Transport, Inc. recognizes the responsibilities we have to our clients, their products and reputations.
