

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

OAKLEY TRANSPORT INC. IS FIRST IN INDUSTRY TO RECEIVE ISO CERTIFICATIONS TWICE

LAKE WALES, FLORIDA (May 14, 2021)—Oakley Transport, Inc., the premier leader in liquid, food-grade transportation is the only bulk food transporter in its industry to be certified twice with the International Standards Organization for ISO 9001:2015 and ISO 22000:2018. ISO certifies their management systems and operation processes, and services meets all requirements for standardization and quality assurance.

In 2015, Oakley started preparing for ISO certification, achieving the goal in 2017, Oakley became the first and only bulk food transporter to be certified to such standards. Never resting and continually auditing all processes for improvement, Oakley was once again awarded re-certifications to the newest versions of ISO certifications ISO 9001:2015 and ISO 22000:2018 in March of 2021.

ISO 9001:2015 and ISO 22000:2018 are stipulations to certify superior operations management, food safety and food defense. Both ensure Oakley's consistency in operations, services, and their ability to meet and exceed all customer and regulatory requirements.

"Being ISO certified demonstrates Oakley's ability to follow procedures and processes," Thomas Oakley, president and chief executive officer said. "It empowers employees with clear direction and the ability to drive improvement. It ultimately is an affirmation to customers of our focus on their cargo, our services, food safety and defense."

This accomplishment reflects Oakley's dedication to customer satisfaction and the integrity of customers' products throughout the entire transportation process.

"We feel these certifications add such a value to our customers," Bob Osburn, chief operation officer said. "They know our diligence in maintaining the safety and integrity of their cargo. From the groves to the processor, the distiller to the bottler, and its final mile onto store shelves and into the homes of the American consumer."

Oakley Transport continues to set itself apart and challenge old ways of thinking, refining every process for more efficient transportation and operations. Their identity lies in serving all its customers thoroughly and to their maximum satisfaction.

"The commitment from our entire organization to achieve this certification was and still remains inspirational," Matt Tocci, director of customer relations said. "To have us all focused on one dedicated goal of superior quality and safety ensures our clients that we not only care, but we strive to be the finest transporter of bulk food on the planet."
